out of their positions.

London, December 7 .- A comparison of the reports from Berlin and Petrograd leads to the conclusion that the Germans again occupy Lodz, from which city they were driven on their first retreat from Warsaw. Berlin makes positive announcement that Lodz is in their hands while Petrograd admits that the situation there is desperate.

If the fall of the city is a fact, it Warsaw again is seriously menaced, but Petrograd declares that the Russians are strong enough to hold the invaders in northern Poland and will content themselves with doing this while devoting their main energy to the reduction of Cracow and the invasion of Hungary. Hungary, according to reports from the Russian capital, is the weak point in the armor of the Teuton allies.

These messages from Petrograd say that even as early as at the time of the fall of Lemberg, Austria asked Russia for terms of peace. The story is again revived in Petrograd in the form of a report that the Hungarian prime minister, on a recent visit to Emperor William, demanded better military protection for Hungary; lack UU of which would cause the loss of the kingdom.

London, Dec. 7.-It would be impossible to underestimate the anxiety felt in Petrograd and reflected in new developments in Poland. The hour is at hand for the combats which may well determine the campaign in the east. Germany has repaired her losses between the Warthe and the Vistula, has withdrawn battered armies from the jaws of the Russian trap; has hurried vast numbers from East Prussia, Posen, Silesia and even from Belgium and France; has solidified a battle line which stretches from Mlava, on the frontier of East Prussia and Poland, to Cracow, and is obviously ready and determined to brave the terrors of winter and the superior numbers of the Russians in a third endeavor to seize Warsaw and the whole Vistula line southward to San-

Selfishness Breaks The Human Back

The other evening in a hotel the girl at the cigar stand was overheard detailing her family history to a traveling man. Among other things she said: "I have a brother thirty-four who is older than father, who is sixty-eight. He looks older and acts older. Nothing worries father, but Joe carries the burden of the world on his back."

That comparison of father and brother sets forth one of the most efficient principles of human existence. Whether the race be physical or mental, we run faster and farther when we carry no burden. The pitiful side of it is that the man who is most burdened will be found in the last analysis to be carrying nobody's load but his own. The man, who day by day enters sympathetically into lifting the burden of others, never Monday and probably Tuesday. complains of the galling weight of life's problems.

Golden Rule is the only relief. That man must succeed best in business who has stripped himself for the race. Men gladly touch hands with confidence. Even the selfish "grouch" sees the star of hope through the eye of the optimist. No man can conceal his true self. A man reads the character of his neighbor without knowing how he does it. What we are cries so loudly that men cannot hear what we say. Spasmodic pretenses at fraternity are like green vines on a stone wall, they are a beautiful sight for a moment, but when the chill blasts of winter come there is nothing left but the stone wall. So such pretenses may hide for a little space a monster of selfishness, but before the pure cold call of self-sacrifice there is nothing left but selfishness.

Men do not admire those who appear to be bearing, like Atlas of old, the big round globe on their back. They intuitively know that the cumbersome sphere from center to shell is an abnormal and exalted self. The girl at the cigar stand did not speak of her brother in tones or terms of admiration, but when she spoke of father, it was, "Oh nothing worries father, he's our chum." And we guess he was. Men would have been glad to have met father, but how about the brother? None were looking for him.

It's the burden they carry—the burden of selfishness that puts men out of the race. The man who is making the most every sign of a foot lump, callous or out of this life is the man who has stripped himself of ever weight, and whether he is pauper or millionaire, is living his on that reliable old remedy Putnam's the sacred college, is dead at Rome. life as naturally and as really as the flowers of the field.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the 'keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action. If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—adull, tired feeling

The question of when Roumania will make her entry into the contest still is being discussed, however, one side desiring to avoid a winter campaign; but the military authorities express the fear that Servia may be defeated before the spring.
